Are you the type of sports fan like myself who loves it when the original teams are the ones thriving in their respective sport? The Los Angeles Dodgers sitting at the top of Major League Baseball just feels right and will continue to feel right for the next three years when they go for a three-peat.

The LA Dodgers won it all in the Bronx. My first thought? One means nothing.

Shohei Ohtani, Freddie Freeman, and Mookie Betts are collectively the best trio in the sport, and it is not a debate.

Okay, do you want more than a trio?

They landed the top veteran pitcher available, Blake Snell, and the best pitching prospect, Roki Sasaki. They brought back all their postseason standouts, including Blake Treinen, Teoscar Hernández, and Kiké Hernández. On top of that, they added veteran reliever Kirby Yates, outfielder Michael Conforto, and one of the best closers in the game, Tanner Scott, who is Shohei Ohtani's kryptonite.

All the leaves are golden brown in LA, and the skies are nothing but sunny.
